

Jeanie Martin

When Jeanie Martin taught commas and Shakespeare, she also taught high school kids how to stand up in front of their peers, overcome their fears and be their best. When Jeanie taught skin care and make up artistry, she also introduced women and men to an opportunity to build their own business by developing relationships and improving their own self esteem. In that time, she has grown a Mary Kay National Area into an organization of over 1500 people in 36 states. For the last 7 years her national area has been averaging $4.5 million in retail sales.

Jeanie has degrees in English and Speech, and a Masters in Reading, and taught high school Speech and English. She has been building her MK business since 1988, and been in a leadership position with Mary Kay Cosmetics for over 25 years. Some think she left teaching to sell lipstick. In truth she found a venue in MK that put her in front of thousands more "grown up kids" to teach and influence.

In 2010 she reached the highest level of Mary Kay Leadership when she was appointed to the National Sales Director position. To put that in perspective, there are about 600,000 Mary Kay consultants in the United States, over 10,000 directors and only 225 nationals. In that capacity as a National Sales Director, she has been invited to work with leaders all over the country who own their own business. "I coach, mentor and lead women to tap out their full potential through the avenue of a business." She's specialized in leadership and motivation as well as sales training and image development. She's committed and passionate about working with winners to actualize their full potential.

Jeanie's mission in life is to teach others how to live richer, more abundant lives. An opportunity to speak gives her a platform for fulfilling this purpose.
